SECTION B
SCOPE OF WORK

B.1 Scope of Work:

The project involves the “daylighting” of a tributary to the Broad Branch watershed in Washington, District of Columbia (District). Broad Branch is a perennial stream that drains into the Rock Creek. Daylighting is the act of restoring to the open air some or all of the flow of a previously covered creek, or stormwater drainage. The project starts at 36th Street NW, where the tributary to Broad Branch enters a pipe and ends at Broad Branch Road where the stream will again be piped. The length of the portion of stream to be daylighted is approximately 1,600 linear feet.

Additionally the project includes the installation of two regenerative stormwater conveyances to stabilize two steep, incised gullies that convey flashy stormwater flows into the newly daylighted tributary. Finally, the restoration effort comprises the establishment of two bioretention cells to treat stormwater from an alley north of Linnean Terrace, NW. (NOTE: A third bioretention cell (Stormwater Recharge Facility #3 on the Plans) will be constructed later is not a part of this Scope of Work.)

The work to be done under this Contract includes, but is not limited to furnishing all labor, materials, equipment, superintendents, transportation and performing all work in strict accordance with the Construction Specifications and Plans.

The Contract covers all aspects of restoring the tributary to Broad Branch. This Contract includes, but is not limited to: site preparation, grading and excavation, backfill and formation of embankments, construction of in-stream rock structures, implementation of adequate erosion and sediment controls, placing channel bedding, constructing stream banks, planting and seeding, installing grass swales and bioretention cells, and all other aspects as outlined in the Construction Specifications and Plans. (NOTE: The plans included as an attachment with this Scope of Work are 95% designs. Some specifications may change during permitting; however these changes are not expected to change the cost of the project.)
